

New Automatic Umbrella Wrappers Receive Warm Welcome in Washington D.C.

Umbrella Bagger announces the arrival of all-new automatic wet umbrella wrappers, helping local D.C. Area businesses to control rainwater and prevent accidents.

Washington, DC (PRWEB) August 27, 2013 -- An all-new line of Automatic Wet Umbrella Wrappers has just arrived at UmbrellaBagger.com, and the reception has been better than anticipated. Sleek and affordable, these new units wrap a wet umbrella in a single, fluid motion. With such a high degree of usability, the new class of umbrella wrappers make it easier for large crowds to stow wet umbrellas, control rainwater accumulation, and prevent in-store accidents.

Wet umbrellas inevitably draw rainwater past standard entryway mats, according to safety researchers at Umbrella Bagger. If overlooked, rainwater accumulates over time and creates dangerous walking conditions in lobbies, reception areas, and elevator lobbies. Moreover, water accumulation can occur along smooth, uncovered floor spaces that are not typically targeted for cleaning by maintenance personnel.

In recent years, wet umbrella bag stands have been a simple solution to this dangerous problem. Customers enter the premises, take a bag, stow their umbrella, and rainwater is contained. Commercial businesses gain more than just dry floors, however.

In an industry where the "devil's in the details," wet umbrella bag dispensers are a simple way to show visitors that their safety and comfort are a top priority. Moreover, umbrella bag dispensers might just prevent a lawsuit.

According to the All Injury Program, 57% of storefront and property owners say slip and fall accidents were the most costly and time consuming business dispute category of 2008. This statistic is presented by the National Floor Safety Institute, in a report titled "New Techniques to Control Slips and Falls." The report is available for download at NFSI.org.
